ਮਾਯਾ

Dear Dr. Sharma

Greetings from Majha House, Amritsar's very own literary and cultural hub. Ever since the inception of Majha House, we have been dedicated to the promotion of literature and culture in the holy city of Amritsar. Over the years we have invited the best minds in different fields making for eclectic gatherings and stimulating thoughts and discussions.

We are pleased to share with you that in collaboration with Prabha Khaitan Foundation we are hosting a One Day Festival 'Punjabi Yuva Sanmelan: Sahit Ate Sabhyachaar' at Majha House, 498, Basant Aveue, Amritsar on Sunday, the 27th of March, 2022. The festival is dedicated to the in-depth exploration of the many nuances of our beloved mother tongue: Punjabi.

Dr Surjit Patar has kindly consented to be a part of the festival. Our other speakers are also renowned literary figures in different genres of poetry. We shall be delighted if you too could take some time out to be part of this vibrant literary and cultural event, and also select a few students from your institute to attend the same as it will be a great learning opportunity for them. The invite carrying details of the program is attached herewith for your reference. We look forward to having you with us.

Warm Regards

Preeti Gill

TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

AMRITSAR, JANUARY 25

Whether creating Punjabi version of popular revolution song 'Bella Ciao' or rendition of 'Jugni', the farmers' movement has been getting support in the form of protest art. Hosting an afternoon of music and art form in their support, students from city expressed their solidarity through theatre, poetry and a photo exhibition.

'Students for farmers' was led by Harpeet Singh, a literature scholar from GNDU. With presence of senior artistes from city, including Arvinder Chamak, Gurinder Makana and Dr SS Bahl, the event was dedicated to give a platform to youth, to document the movement through their sensibilities.

'Jugni', a genre of narrative used in Punjabi folk written by Dr SS Bahl, which is

'Students for farmers' became a platform for young voices of creative dissent amid the farm stir event. "The youth of Punjab, until now, was being portrayed through a narrative that only talked about drug abuse and foreign dreams. But this movement has unveiled a parallel picture, where the young have led the movement through knowledge and awareness. Through our event, we wanted to extend an opportunity by giving platform to young voices of creative dissent," said Harpeet Singh.

Among several performances were plays like 'Kisan Kaun Ne' that talked about how the three farm laws will impact traditional farming. Supnandan,

NEWS IN THE WINTER OF DISSENT

Majha House organises discussion with founders of Trolley Times

DELHI, JANUARY 3

The Majha House organised an online discussion with the founders of the newspaper — Trolley Times — that emerged during the agitation of farmers.

The discussion had eminent journalist and author P Saurabh as one of the speakers, apart from the founders of Trolley Times — Surmeet Maan, Navkiran Naat, Gurdeep Singh Bhaini and Jaspreet Singh. The bi-weekly newsletter was launched in support of farmers' agitation.

Talking about the newspaper, Surmeet, who has a journalism background and since the true nature of the peasant movement was not reaching out to people through the mainstream media, he came up with the idea of Trolley Times. "It is an attempt to bridge the communication gap created by the mainstream media between those sitting in parliament and the leaders regarding the issue for the rest of the country," said Maan. The bi-weekly newsletter published in Punjabi and Hindi has soon become popular for the very ideals it stands for — the significance of free, unbiased news.

There are requests from various provinces of India to start their versions as well. There are proposals to print it Australia and UK, as well," Maan said.

Educator and poet Prof NS Jhali, who was in conversation with the panelists, agreed that even in difficult times, people have chosen to put their trust in the medium of newspaper.

Leaders such as Gandhi, Patel and Nehru conveyed the right news to people from also been seen in this movement that gender-determined roles in society are also changing, where women are at Nishchaland with men, who are also seen engaged in kitchen works, while young men are making food and cooking," he said.

P Saurabh, while speaking about the issue and the ripple it has created, said even Green Revolution or Globalisation adversely affected the farmers. "But because they did not have access to information and means of proper communication at that time, they could not stand together and activate a movement. It is not like this today because we have the support of social media, but this bi-weekly newsletter is bringing aware-
